Revival at High-Lonesome

One of the most successful revivals on the Plains closed at H.L. some July 12. The people of this neighborhood got busy and erected a large arbor of bear grass, and the pastor, Rev. Rodan of Lovington seemed to have touched a tender spot from the start.

Interest began with the meeting, and seemed to increase. Under the forceful sermons there were thirteen accessions to the church by Baptism, and a church was organized with a membership of thirty-one. A Sunday school is in a healthy condition with a membership of eighty-three.

Rapid Transit For Ice

The mail car that went out yesterday morning to Lovington loaded to be loaded with hay. No doubt over accused Kerr of using hay bunnies on his mail line, and the idea of carrying hay to Plains was not so high out there when the women have to climb windmills under to find their cows.

Want To Come In With Lovington, Or Stand Alone

On Saturday, last, there took place at Eunice a meeting on the part of good citizens there which, though not representative of all Eddy and Chaves Counties yet expressed such sentiments as have been heard before, from one end of the Plains to the other.

The good people of Eunice were laboring under the impression that Lovington folks were out for the county seat, regardless of whose throat was cut. And they were honest enough to say that the man or people who would cut their throats were no friends of theirs. They feel should the southern part of Eddy County be cut out of the new county they would be thrown to Carlsbad, where they do not desire to be, and that the people of Lovington would be indirectly the means of helping them paralyze their efforts and to stifle their cries for help.

Viewing things from their stand point, there never was a more earnest, honest, and determined pronouncement than that which emanated from Eunice last Saturday. The man who will not promise to help the Eunice people in their efforts to get into the new county may as well tell them he does not want their vote.

Fortunate by no such attitude was ever assumed by Lovington. It has been a matter of feasibility all the while. Those favor in the line six miles below Monument were doing so on the belief that that county, and that only would get by the Senate. But Eunice people don't carry for feasibility and policy.

They say the policy of cutting them out is ruinous to them for many years, and that we misunderstand them. They are not fighting Lovington for the county seat, nor any other place. They stated in open meeting as we understood them, that if Lovington would help to cut them into the new county, they will vote for Love, and then vote for Lovington, trusting that some good day our honor would compel us to reciprocate and help them cut out again, with Monument, Eunice, or Henry as a seat of their new county. But they are not demanding a new county at this time for themselves, as we understand. They are plainly what it means to be isolated down there, and tied forever to Carlsbad.

Their plan to us is an earnest of a faithful appeal to good citizens. What shall we do? But Eunice is not by herself. The rank and file of the citizens of the entire Plains people declare for practically the same thing. The Eunice people say in effect, "don't mention county seat; to the dickens with that; cut us loose from the valley; we don't care if the county goes from the south pole to the north pole."

We can but feel that the proposition of the people of Eunice is pretty nearly a correct version of the sentiment of the entire Plains country. If so, was to the man who stands in their way. Vox populi, Vex Dei. Temporary pacific action may take place, but, like Bango's Ghost, it will not down. And a thing is never settled until it is settled right.

The Hon. R. P. Love was at this meeting, and so far succeeded in making himself understood that a statement was made in open meeting that he had made from forty to sixty votes by coming.

These people had it in their minds to nominate a man from among themselves, and the name of Wm. B. Watkins was mentioned. But while the reporter had to leave before the meeting closed, the sentiment seemed to be that no nomination was necessary after a statement by Mr. Love.
